3 Example of Program Improvement

2018-2019:

Moving the capstone course to the fall semester after missing the benchmark for students presenting their research in a professional setting enabled multiple students in the department to present papers in the spring at the Louisiana Historical Association annual meeting.

2019-2020:

Philosophy began offering a new course on "Existentialism" to appeal to students in that concentration.

2020-2021:

Both the method and capstones classes were moved online due to the extraordinary circumstances of the pandemic and hurricanes.

2021-2022:

Philosophy is developing a new capstone course for students in that concentration of the Liberal Studies degree. The Religious Studies concentration was de-activated due to low completers and the difficulty of offering the required courses due to faculty attrition.

2022-2023:

The department has developed an internship option for students in the Pre-Law concentration of the Liberal Studies degree. The first student is signed up to complete the Pre-Law internship in fall 2023. New discipline-specific advisors have been assigned for students in the Philosophy and Women's Studies concentrations.

4 Program Highlights from the Reporting Year

2018-2019:

The women's studies brown bag lecture series created by Dr. Janet Allured, and Dr. Philippe Girard's women's history series on the McNeese radio station, both continue to promote the women's studies concentration of the Liberal Studies degree successfully. Dr. Allured also now officially advises students in that concentration.

Dr. Charles McNeely staged several theater productions that promote the Liberal Studies degree's theater arts concentration.

Dr. William Noseworthy created several new courses, including a History of Buddhism course and a History of Asian Religion course, to promote the Liberal Studies degree's religious studies concentration.

History department faculty met with Philosophy faculty members to discussing how to coordinate scheduling and advising for students in the Philosophy concentration of the Liberal Studies degree.

2019-2020:

Dr. Noseworthy created a course on the history of Hinduism to promote the Liberal Studies BA's Religious Studies concentration. Dr Allured's women's studies speaker series continued successfully, as did Dr Girard's radio program on women's history.

2020-2021:

Though the pandemic and hurricanes disrupted plans for this year, Dr McNeely's theater productions resumed in the spring, and Dr Girard continued his radio program on women's history. Dr Noseworthy taught his history of Buddhism class for the first time, which had a strong enrollment and positive student response.

2021-2022:

The Women's Studies brown bag speaker series resumed successfully following disruption by hurricanes and the pandemic. Planning is moving forward with the colleges of Liberal Arts and Agriculture for a new "Environmental Studies" concentration in Liberal Studies.

2022-2023:

We plan to rebrand the degree by changing the name from Liberal Studies to Humanities which we believe will better and more accurately market the program. This change goes into effect for the 2023-2024 academic year. Dr. Girard's women' history radio program and the Women's Studies brown bag speaker series both remain very popular.

5 Program Mission

The purpose of the Bachelor of Arts in Liberal Studies program is to provide our graduates with knowledge of significant past events and values, to train them in research methods, to foster cross-disciplinary collaboration, and to teach them proper writing techniques. The knowledge and skills our graduates learn will enable them to become infromed and responsible citizens in a multicultural, global community.

6 Institutional Mission Reference

McNeese State University is primarily a teaching institution whose mission is successful education of the undergraduate students and services to the employers and communities in its region. McNeese uses a traditional admissions process based on courses completed, GPA, and standardized test scores.

The B.A. in Liberal Studies will specifically focus on this segment of the University mission statement: "successful education of the undergraduate students."

7 Assessment and Benchmark

Assessment: Assignments administered in HIST 101, 102, 201, and 202.

Benchmark: At least 70% of students in survey courses will achieve a score of 70% or better on embedded assignments on civics (201 and 202) or problem solving (101 and 102).

Prior to 2017-2018, the benchmark was students in general education survey courses will on average score 70% or better on a critical thinking assignment in order to demonstrate proficiency in that skill.

Prior to 2015-2016, scores for pre-test and post-test were assessed, with a benchmark of 10% improvement.

Beginning in 2021-22, the history department's general education courses are assessing the new SLOs for gen ed (civics/ personal development, or problem solving).

Cross-Disciplinary Trends [Program]

Graduates will evaluate cross-disciplinary trends to make sound judgments in academic and professional environments.

7.1.1 Analysis of Data and Plan for Continuous Improvement

2018-2019:

The data is now disaggregated by online and face-to-face sections. Online courses performed as well or better than their in-person counterparts.

Data is not available to measure the results of this assessment by student rather than by course section. Also this is the last year history general education courses will assess critical thinking as a student learning outcome, so changing this assessment this year is not likely to lead to significant program improvement.

All sections except one in-person 202 course met the benchmark. That section scored a 68%, so missed the benchmark by 2%. That instructor will be encouraged to improve results.

2019-2020:

We are now tracking the critical thinking scores by student rather than by section.

Performance generally is strong and above the benchmark despite the pandemic disruption of the spring semester.

2020-2021:

The planned general education redesign means that this is the last year that the department's survey courses will assess critical thinking, though it remains a foundational skill that our programs are intended to develop. The ongoing pandemic and two fall hurricanes caused all courses to shift online including many that were intended to be face to face, making this a year whose teaching metrics are difficult to assess, though most indications including these would seem to indicate it was a successful year, which is a credit to both our faculty and students.

2021-2022:

This is our first year assessing the new Gen Ed SLOs. Data is not available for the fall as it was not reported in a way that was consistent with the new intention of tracking the specific number of students meeting the benchmark rather than the overall percentage on the assignment. Since the fall was the pilot semester for the assignment that might be for the best. Spring data shows both online and in person courses meeting the benchmark. As these are new SLOs, new assignments, and a new way of analyzing the data, the department faculty will meet and consider these results and if adjustments to the new assignments are needed.

2022-2023:

The benchmark was met. The lowest score was for online HIST 102, which had a new instructor assigned in the spring who was teaching the class and the SLO for the first time, with promising results but lower than those for the more veteran instructors. Revisions to the assignments assessing the SLOs are ongoing, based on instructor and student feedback. Effective 2023-2024, we will increase benchmark to 70% of students will score 75% or higher.

8 Assessment and Benchmark Student Evaluation of Instruction (SEI)

Assessment: Student Evaluation of Instruction.

Benchmark: The mean average of students completing the Student Evaluation of Instruction (SEI) in history courses, where the scale is 1.00 to 5.00 and 5.00 is "excellent," will rate their instructor at 4.50 or above on Item #7, which reads: "The instructor requires students to think critically about the people and events of the past."

Prior to 2016-2017, the benchmark was an average score of 4.00 or higher.

8.1.1 Analysis of Data and Plan for Continuous Improvement

2018-2019:

The higher benchmark was again met. The department's general education courses are in the process of being redesigned, with new student learning objectives and assessments, which it is hoped will have a beneficial result on outcomes.

2019-2020:

The new benchmark was again met. Critical thinking remains a key focus of their department's programs.

2020-2021:

The new benchmark was again met, despite difficulties related to the pandemic and hurricanes this year, reflecting the department's continued dedication to teaching critical thinking and success in doing so despite considerable obstacles.

2021-2022:

The adjusted benchmark was narrowly missed. This was a challenging academic year, with both students and faculty adjusting to the resumption of face-to-face classes, and the history department losing two faculty lines. We will continue focusing on developing critical thinking skills, still a key goal of the department, though it is no longer a SLO for general education.

2022-2023:

The adjusted benchmark was met. The critical thinking score (4.52) was slightly higher than the overall average SEI scores for the department (4.49) indicating that students see this as a particular strength of program faculty. Higher results this year also reflect a more "normal" year with campus and classes still recovering from disruptions in previous years due to hurricanes, the pandemic, and other natural disasters.

9 Assessment and Benchmark History Department Exit Survey

Assessment: History Department Exit Survey.

Benchmark: 75% of libreral studies graduates on the History Department Exit Survey, where the scale is 1.00 to 4.00 and 4.00 is "Excellent," will rate the department at a 3.00 or higher on the question which asks if they gained an appreciation for elements of diversity within the world and within societies.

9.1.1 Analysis of Data and Plan for Continuous Improvement

2018-2019:

Benchmark met. The department this year added a new faculty member who is a specialist in Asian history and created four new upper-level courses on Asian history. It is intended that this updated curriculum will increase students' appreciation for diversity and understanding of global issues.

Will consider increasing the benchmark.

2019-2020:

Benchmark met. The disruption caused by the pandemic in the spring made planning based on this year's data difficult.

2020-2021:

Benchmark again met. Reflecting the importance of diversity to our program, the history department hired a specialist in African American history to begin this year. Endowed Professorship money was also used to hire a visiting lecturer to teach two upper level Women's Studies courses (on "Women & the Environment" and "Feminist Theory"), which were well received.

2021-2022:

The Women's Studies course on "Women & the Environment" was taught again and another section of "Feminist Theory" is scheduled for the fall. I taught a Colonial America class that heavily focused on the non-English origins of many of the settlers in early America.

2022-2023:

Benchmark met. Women's Studies courses on "Women & the Environment " and "Feminist Theory" were offered again this year, and a history course on "Women & Religion." Next year we hope to hire a full-time faculty member who will teach women's history courses. Effective 2023-2024, we will increase benchmark to 70% of graduates will rate the department 3.25 or higher.

10.1.1 Analysis of Data and Plan for Continuous Improvement

2018-2019:

The benchmark was met. At the departmental faculty meeting in the fall the instructors for HIST 300 and 410 discussed how best to coordinate the departmental methods courses and how to best assess these outcomes going forward.

2019-2020:

Benchmark met. The disruption of the pandemic in the spring made planning based on this year's data difficult.

2020-2021:

Benchmark met. The performance of the Liberal Studies students on this metric was strong, despite the challenges posed this year by the pandemic and hurricanes, a testament to the dedication and perseverance of our students and faculty.

2021-2022:

Benchmark met. It is the department's intention going forward to alternate offering HIST 300 in online and face-to-face formats to give students the option of taking it in the format that best suits their needs and learning styles.

2022-2023:

The benchmark was not met for the spring, though due to the small sample size, that only represents one student failing to meet the benchmark. HIST 300 has been identified as a key point in the LBST curriculum and going forward when students are identified as underperforming in the course, we plan for advisors to be informed and design specialized interventions to assist the students.

10.2.1 Analysis of Data and Plan for Continuous Improvement

2018-2019:

The benchmark was met. At the departmental faculty meeting in the fall the instructors for HIST 300 and 410 discussed how best to coordinate the departmental methods courses and how to best assess these outcomes going forward. Scheduling and faculty rotation of the methods courses were also discussed.

2019-2020:

Benchmark met. The disruption of the pandemic in the spring made planning based on this year's data difficult.

2020-2021:

Oral presentations unexpectedly had to move online this year due to the pandemic and hurricanes forcing classes to move to remote learning, so students were forced to adapt to new technology and did so successfully, building new and valuable skills.

2021-2022:

The oral presentations, now in both the online and face-to-face sections of HIST 300, remain an important component of LBST students' professional development. Based on the data their performance in this area remains strong.

2022-2023:

The benchmark was met both in the fall face-to-face and spring online HIST 300 sections, though the sample sizes were small. Students in the online section demonstrated proficiency in the use of the technology needed for their virtual presentations, a new and important professional skill that we want to emphasize.

Assessment: HIST 410 research project and presentation.

Benchmark 1: 75% of students in HIST 410, where students must write a lengthy history research paper, will earn a grade of C or better.

Benchmark 2: 75% of students in HIST 410, where students must present their findings orally, will earn a grade of C or better.

Prior to 2018-2019, the benchmarks were 70% of students in HIST 410 will earn a grade of C or better.

Scheduling and faculty rotation of the methods courses were also discussed.

2019-2020:

Strong results again for the research projects in the capstone course. The disruption of the pandemic in the spring made planning based on this year's data difficult.

2020-2021:

Despite the capstone course having to unexpectedly move online due to the pandemic and hurricanes, students produced strong research in the method course, a testament to the perseverance and dedication of our students and faculty.

2021-2022:

The benchmark was met. Dr Crawford taught HIST 410 both semesters this year, joining Dr Girard in the regular rotation for the course, replacing the now retired Dr Allured.

2022-2023:

The benchmark was met. Dr Smith offered a small HIST 410 online spring section as an overload for both online History majors and Liberal Studies majors who transferred into the program and needed the capstone course to graduate in May. Effective 2023-2024, we will increase benchmark to 80% of students earning a grade of C or higher.

11.2.1 Analysis of Data and Plan for Continuous Improvement

2018-2019:

Liberal Studies majors met the benchmark for the oral presentation assessment, a key element in their professional development.

At the departmental faculty meeting in the fall the instructors for HIST 300 and 410 discussed how best to coordinate the departmental methods courses and how to best assess these outcomes going forward. Scheduling and faculty rotation of the methods courses were also discussed.

2019-2020:

The higher benchmark was again met. The pandemic in the spring disrupted end of year assessment and planning.

2020-2021:

Despite the capstone course having to unexpectedly move online due to the pandemic and hurricanes, students produced strong presentations in the method course, a testament to the perseverance and dedication of our students and faculty. The presentations being done remotely added another important skill set for our students.

2021-2022:

In the spring the capstone course was taught online, but going forward our intention is for one in-person section of the capstone to be offered each fall, with an option for online majors to join the class remotely. So the oral presentations could be done either remotely or inperson, both of which represent useful skill development for our majors.

2022-2023:

The Liberal Studies students met the benchmark. The students in the spring online section demonstrated proficiency in the use of the technology needed for virtual presentations, an important new skill that the program is emphasizing. Effective 2023-2024, we will increase the benchmark to 80% of students earning a grade of C or higher.
